Time Value of Money (TVM) The principle that money available today is worth more than the same amount in the future due to its potential earning capacity. This concept underpins most financial calculations.

investment projects, including net present value (NPV) and internal rate of return (IRR). Cost of Capital Understanding a firm's cost of financing through debt and equity, which influences investment decisions and corporate valuation. Detailed Breakdown of Key Topics Time Value of Money (TVM) Why It Matters: The core idea behind TVM is that a dollar today is worth more than a dollar tomorrow because of its potential to earn interest. This concept is fundamental for valuing investments, calculating loan payments, and assessing financial decisions. Key Calculations: Present Value (PV): The current worth of a future sum. Future Value (FV): The amount an investment will grow to over time. Discount Rate: The rate used to determine PV from FV. Annuities and Perpetuities: Series of cash flows occurring at regular intervals. Practical Applications: Comparing investment options with different cash flow streams. Calculating mortgage or loan payments. Valuing bonds and stocks. Risk and Return Understanding the Relationship: Investments with higher potential returns typically carry higher risk. The challenge is to balance these to meet financial goals. Measuring Risk: Standard deviation of returns Beta coefficient (for stocks) Variance Expected Return Calculations: Expected return is the weighted average of possible outcomes, considering their probabilities. Portfolio Diversification: Reducing risk by combining different assets whose returns are not perfectly correlated. Financial Markets and Institutions Market Types: Primary Markets: Where new securities are issued. Secondary Markets: Where existing securities are traded. Key Players: Investors (retail and institutional) Firms issuing securities Financial intermediaries (banks, brokerages) Market Efficiency: The Efficient Market Hypothesis (EMH) suggests that stock prices reflect all available information, impacting investment strategies. Security Valuation Techniques Discounted Cash Flow (DCF): Calculates the present value of expected future cash flows, providing a basis for determining whether an asset is over- or undervalued. Valuation Models: Dividend Discount Model (DDM) Free Cash Flow to Firm (FCFF) Relative valuation (comparing multiples) Capital Budgeting and Investment Decisions NPV Method: Calculates the difference between the present value of cash inflows and outflows. A positive NPV indicates a profitable project. IRR Method: The discount rate that makes the NPV zero; used to assess profitability. Other Techniques: Payback period Profitability index Cost of Capital Components: Cost of debt: After-tax interest rate Cost of equity: Expected return required by shareholders WACC (Weighted Average Cost of Capital): A weighted average of the costs of debt and equity, used as a hurdle rate for investment decisions.
